

Love, Joy, Peace, The Devil and Words of Comfort

The Chinese authorities seem to have a fear of Social Networking but why? Obviously they think they'll lose control of their youth – let's hope so. Here in the West, the authorities embrace it and even encourage it by getting their wives involved. They know that apart from the usual groups making noises about various causes, social networking just fosters a Social Consciousness and that plays right into their hands. Keep um txtin and loading up their silly videos for hours on end and the dumbing down process is working effectively – nobody thinks outside of the box...

Just imagine if our youngsters woke up, realized the potential of social networking and used it to change the world for the better. What a religion that would be!

Talking of religions, how anybody can worship that pedophilia cesspit in Rome is beyond me. What possible association can they have with Christ consciousness? Millions worship the pope as God's representative – such is the ignorance of the masses. I have no doubt that certain gods, demi-gods and fallen angels are well represented here on Earth and the Vatican is a prime example of this. The controlling elite families love this shit and must laugh all the way to their banks.

The antithesis of the above of course is Love. The biggest problem I find is that people don't know what it is! Take the perfectionist parents as an example – they won't discipline their children because their ideal of love is so pure and non-interventional. They end up with little brats because they have failed to understand that the discipline IS the love. If you don't discipline your children then they, just like gods do, will assume the role of pack leader.

If somebody strokes your altered-ego with words of comfort, is that an act of love? Energy vampires are very popular amongst their emotionally charged followers. People don't want answers because that would mean change; they want the feeling of happiness they get from hearing comforting words. The greatest gift a guru could give his flock would be to teach them not to need him! But then of course he wouldn't be a popular guru; he'd be on his way to Christhood instead. Once again, the controlling elite love this shit, they love it when the gurus preach about peace and they pin medals to their breastplates for doing so.

Do you know why Yeshua (Jesus) only had 12 disciples and wasn't popular? It's because he knew a much greater truth than the energy vampires and he told it to those who enquired of him, albeit that he oftentimes had to speak in riddles because of the low intelligence of his audience. He lived for truth; he wasn't concerned about being popular. So who would you want to be your teacher? An entity who can help you to evolve or a slick orator whose words bring pleasure to millions?

Love is the ability to tell somebody the truth, no matter what the personal cost.

One can derive much pleasure from materialism and voyeurism but it never brings joy. I created a blockage in my body because I stopped the flow of joy in my life. I had to get sick to understand that! I fell into the trap that so many people do – I tried to please someone else and in the process I ceased to live true to myself.

Joy goes much deeper than mere pleasure and bringing joy to self is congruent with self-understanding. For instance, in my case I have attracted many women in my life based upon my physical prowess or rather they were attracted to me because they ‘fancied’ me physically and vice versa. Of course there’s nothing wrong with that and it’s commonplace. However, as one advances spiritually, it becomes important for ‘partners’ to be ‘interested in’ each other and for there to be a commonality in MIND. To want someone for their mind and to want to make love with them because of it...

If you don’t have that in your relationship then what do you have?

It’s all very well having a practical, functional, means to an end kind of relationship but it’s never enough to an advancing soul; the mind thing and mutual ‘interest in’ has to be there. Ultimately, we will all be beyond the human drama and the joy will be in just being who we are.

Did you know that peace is innate in every human being and everybody yearns for that which is already within? Now let me dress that up for you and tell it to you over and over again along with some other niceties. I guarantee that by the time I’m finished you’ll be feeling happy about the message but I also guarantee you that you won’t be any more enlightened! Do you want a fancy toolbox full of useless tools or an old worn canvass bag full of kit you can use?

Peace is really the same as love and joy – it is an individual thing. It only comes to an individual when all of their unfinished business has been taken care of, which essentially means they have resolved all of their emotions into wisdom. As global consciousness rises and people become more at peace within themselves then global peace will follow. Individuals with eventually disobey the ignorant orders of their controllers...

To be at peace with all peoples you have to be at peace. And to be at peace within yourself means your secret life has to go and the lies have to stop. Facing the internal enemy (fear) is paramount. The Devil only exists in one place – your mind. That’s why Yeshua (Jesus) took a long period of time to purge his demons (limitations) – genius dude.

Thanks for reading and allowing me to write for you – I’m in joy when I give...
