

My truth about Master teachers and Gurus

There are many gurus in the world who have millions of followers. The gurus entertain their flock (they are good orators) and the devotees succumb to serving. The guru is powerless without the promise of his devotee, namely, to use him as the source of inspiration and truth; and to financially support his events. In this way the guru enslaves his devotee, who in-turn has simply been seduced by a clever salesman.

How is all this possible and what is the difference between a guru and a Master teacher? Firstly, we must understand that there are many people in the world who are looking for answers and seeking enlightenment. Therefore there is a need in the marketplace, which can easily be fulfilled by one who can tell a good story. And if the stories convey a beautiful message then the guru has a potential audience running into millions!

If you can point to a lineage of so-called holy men and tell people that love, peace and fulfilment all lie 'within'; then you can just keep repeating your mantra using different humorous stories, taking pregnant pauses when you deliver your punchlines. People are too stupid to be able to see that you aren't really giving them any basis for wisdom; they will even think you are wise when they draw a blank from your orchestrated pauses. You can't lose if you continue to hold your presence well. You will have cleverly manipulated the vulnerable into believing they need you and then you'll easily be able to convince them of the gratitude they should feel when they serve you. If you can also fend off the few curly questions (be ready with practised answers that will appease the majority) then you will be the shepherd with many sheep.

I really don't like the way these gurus enslave their followers to propel their own images. They even withhold certain knowledge until the student has made the promise that effectively robs them of their power. Can you believe that there are people who spend their own time and money flying around the globe just to pay homage to them? It's almost inconceivable that there are millions of idiots who are more idiotic than the gurus!

The likes of Prem Rawat and Sai Baba are a disgrace to humanity because they separate their devotees from the truth, being that there is a covenant between each individual and the god within. There is no need for a guru to be an intermediary between the individual and their god within. So why do they do it? Because they don't know the truth, they have been deluded since childhood and caught in the traps of power, greed, recognition and self-importance. They are experts at exacting mind-control upon the vulnerable. These 'Peace Troubadours' will continue to get prizes from authoritative institutions and take money and possessions from the ignorant...

Take a look for yourself at the sickness that prevails in our world - devotees kissing the feet of their guru.

Are the gurus and their rituals any different from the pompous ceremonial parades of the men and women in cloth, the politicians who bow to the establishment and the elitist families who rule the world? No. They are all tarnished with the same brush.

Those who separate us from the truth about our divinity are anti-Christ operatives - period. And who commands the largest direct following of the ignorant majority?

On the other hand, a Master teacher requires no promises from the student body and they don't 'need' any kind of devotional service - they are not insecure! If you worship them you will be removed from their audiences; that's if you don't change your mind and accept your equality with the Master. A Master teacher is only interested in empowering you; they are already empowered by virtue of the choices they made and continue to make - thus they don't need any kind of allegiance, loyalty, promises or worship from you.

I know of two master teachers, namely, Ramtha (channelled by JZ Knight) and the collective consciousness known as Abraham (channelled by Esther Hicks). Sampling both teachers is a wise thing to do.

So what will a Master teacher teach you? They will lovingly give you their truth, which initially will just be philosophy to you, beautiful nevertheless. As time goes by you will validate (or not) the philosophy through your own experiences and a greater truth will surely flow into your life. Only when this is done will their loftier truth become your truth. Teaching you greater knowledge and initiating you towards experiencing that knowledge to gain in terms of wisdom, is the most loving thing any great Master can give to you. These are beings who are only interested in helping you - such is their unconditional love for all of mankind.

What does it take for a devout Christian or a guru worshiper to embrace the evolutionary step-up to where they can take responsibility for their own evolution and set about educating themselves in the direction of self-empowerment? I can tell you from experience that it takes a lot, because these are people who are entrenched in a belief system to where they see some other person as the answer to their salvation. And that robs them of their divine power.

Here is the basic problem - no matter what a person's level of awareness is; everybody thinks they know best. And one of the biggest mistakes people make is they listen to the opinions of idiots. Come on let's be honest here, everybody is correct in his or her truth. And most people have a fistful of ignorant opinions, which they'll happily share with you, especially if it keeps you in their enfoldment of limitation. Most people will try to get you to comply with their mind because that makes them feel comfortable, and if you agree, it gives them permission to place their drama on you.

How much longer are you going to be a fool? What does it take for you to go out on a limb? Bravery, fortitude, will, knowledge, conviction?

How can you tell a real master? They give to you without any conditions whatsoever. In other words, they empower you. All other so-called teachers are fakes because they are severely flawed in the most important area; namely, the power is going in the wrong direction! My advice to you is to get rid of the idiots in your life and become resolute in your own truth. Now that is empowering!

You are not here to give your power away to a dog or to another dog owner - you are here to be the pack-leader. Living your life to please other people makes you powerless. What you see in them also exists in you because if it didn't, you wouldn't be able to recognise it. You are deluded if you think otherwise... Freedom comes when you make no promises to anybody - save yourself. The days of the Tyrants are numbered - reclaim your power now!

What Stress is for aspiring Masters and not for misled guru worshipers and Christians. I am aligned with the American Gnostic School wherefrom Ramtha the great Master teacher teaches. I also enjoy the teachings of Abraham very much. I am a god expressing in my own right - I have not given my power away to another god and will never do so. I have a kind of symbiotic relationship with source energy, in that the source fulfils my desires/intentions (in accordance with the vibrational consciousness & energy I offer to it).

Please try to avoid the trapping of making an IMAGE out of Spirituality and Enlightenment, because the truth is, it's entirely the opposite. If you want flowery words and comfortable 'feel good' teachings then go visit your priest or guru or one of those so-called spiritual teachers doing seminars around the world.

Just in the same way as you can make your god anything e.g. money; you can make an 'image' out of anything to comply with your mind. If you are looking for perfection and you want other people to comply with your ideals, then you haven't understood the imperfection of God.

For a long time I was having dreams about playing football and I couldn't understand why. I thought it was the way my subconscious mind was repairing my legs but it didn't add up because the dreams were not consistent with working my legs during the daytime. The coin finally dropped. I had previously gone within and asked my god to reveal to me all of my limitations held subconsciously (in long-term memory), which would prevent me from manifesting my list of desired abilities.

The recurring dream was a reminder not only of the fact that I was a good footballer as a youngster but also of the reason that I was. I was motivated to be so because my altered-ego desired recognition from my parents and this was the way I got it. I was motivated to do well at school and in sport because it pleased my parents.

In the quest for self-mastery one has to learn that real masters walk in silence; they do not seek recognition or propagate themselves to get such. It may be inevitable that it will eventually find them because of their extraordinary abilities but it is not what motivates them. Be very wary of the 'big images' of this world and recognise that worshiping them will not enlighten you. As Ramtha has said, "Enlightenment is not some new age diet or giving your money away to a guru; it's like a White Knight who rides up and chops your head off!!"

Please remember that we are not here to work and slave for the greedy minds of an elite few. We are here to uncover personal truth from the very core of our beings and experience the joy of bringing forth this truth into our lives. What does this take for us to do? It means we have to peel away at the lies, the limitations, the images and false gods of this world; and thus we tear down the walls that trap us into human consciousness. Indeed, we are no longer so-called human beings when we have mastered ourselves. Have I made that clear enough for you? Email me at gary at whatstress dot com if you want further clarification on this.
