

Freedom by Gary Bate

What is it? To come and go as you please? To be free of people making demands on you? To be free of your own addictions? To travel wherever you want to go whenever you want to go there? To be able to leave possessions and responsibilities for undefined periods of time? To be able to experience your every desire? I'd say it's all of these things, wouldn't you?

Do we, do you, do I really want to be free?

Imagine that you can just sit in your armchair, close your eyes and instantly transport yourself to anywhere on this planet. No costs of travel, nobody's permission to get, no I.D.'s to show and no paperwork to fill in! Would that not be freedom?

Further, imagine you could willfully transport yourself to a parallel universe or to a higher dimensional frequency, which exists in a different time flow. Would you go there or would that put the fear of God in you? I mean, what if you went into a faster time and then when you came back, everyone you knew were long dead?

Be logical – consciousness is everything.

Being a Time-traveller is the only real freedom, but most people will not desire real freedom because of their emotional attachments. You can't time-travel if you are emotional.

To disappear and re-appear at will in any time-flow, one has to be free of all attachments – free of all people, places, animals and things...

So it is, upon this planet, the inhabitants do not want to be free and that's why they're not free – consciousness is everything.

The irony is – the very things that enslave us are the very things that we can't take with us. We spend our lives trying to build a false sense of security and we live in the hope that we don't blow it all too early. We do as we're told, we comply and we pay for their permission to travel, which is our God-given birth-right.

We are the authors of our own demise.

Time-travellers have been caught in photographs – they do exist! Just like Star Trek, some come back to try and change something to improve the future. You like to travel? This should be your ideal. You can sunbathe under a golden sun and under a blue sun in the next moment...

Do we need houses? They're just short-term experiences
Do we need fast cars and bikes? They're just short-term experiences
Do we need pensions? Yes until we learn how to time-travel
Do we need animals? They're beautiful, short-term experiences
Do we need families? Yes until we learn how to time-travel
Do we need lovers and partners? They're usually just short-term experiences

Do we really need anything? Yes, we all need to learn how to time-travel and that's all about shifting gears and letting go of all the other stuff we think we need.

Shortly, 90% of people will find themselves in survival mode. I've already been there and it helped me to realise the folly of this mind-controlled existence ~ Gary Bate <https://www.whatstress.com/>
