

There are as many different opinions and perspectives and viewpoints as one can imagine and this bears out the fact that truth is subjective. Even the person who tries to convince you that there's an objective, absolute truth, is just expressing their own truth, which is proof that there is only subjective truth.

Your point of observation is unique to everyone else's. Even if many are viewing the same event, all come to it from a different angle and from a different accumulation of past experiences and wisdom gleaned therefrom. When you are present, so is your mind, which is unique to you.

I have just had more surgery, for the removal of an infected sebaceous cyst from my back. They left the wound open so it would heal from the inside out and gave me strong pain relief and 3 more days of antibiotics. I'm sore but I can obviously write :)

I went through the usual A & E route, where everyone gets screened (triage) but I managed to get straight into A & E (because I had a letter from my GP), so my wait was only 6 hours! I sat close to reception as the people piled in...

After 6 hours and bloods/obs being done, I got referred upstairs to a surgical waiting ward, where I eventually saw a registrar surgeon and anaesthetist and was asked to return for surgery (maybe) the next day at 7 AM. Yesterday obviously arrived, but initially there were no beds available, so the wait continued. One lady had been waiting there for 2 days without food! Late morning arrived and music comes to my ears, one 'male' bed had become available and my name was on it! I was operated on at about 1pm and left at 5 with my meds. Walking my dogs in the cold was refreshing after the hospital experience. Them pouches need walking every day :)

Why am I telling you all this? Because I am changed as a result of the experience. The staff were impeccable and if I had been trying to find fault I would have failed. Most of the people arriving at the A & E reception were courteous (even the guy who had been stabbed in the foot who had been dropped there by the police). The receptionist was mega-busy but she still managed to find me a phone charger! My lasting impressions?

We need to stop keep blaming Putin (because, in fact, he acted 8 years too late) and this energy crises isn't down to him – it was already happening and it got deliberately exacerbated by Western sanctions against him. The global (Davos) elite are responsible for this crippling inflation. Their plan is to bring down the economies and usher in their fully controlled, Central Bank Digital Currencies.

Sunak is ex Goldman Sachs, so of course he's going to remove the cap on bankers bonuses, whilst the nurses are working their tits off for basic money! The trouble is, would the Zionist Starmer do any better? I doubt it – it's all rigged!

Mind starts to get lost as control tightens and that's exactly why the Davos elite do it. Do you really believe Sunak, Biden, Jinping, Trudeau et al are working independently from Schwab? And who is Schwab reporting to?

So whilst this Global Racket continues, what should we all be doing, apart from helping each other?

It's not just all about you, you, you and me, me, me – that's the subjective, emotional mindset that results from all the deliberate conditioning (propaganda). We need to step out of that and realise it's about ALL of us, because we are ALL gods in garments of limitation (genetically-driven bodies).

If you read my material, I promise you that you will become more 'open' and more 'objective' and in doing so, you will birth new potentials in that genetic garment of yours ~ Gary Bate of whatstress.
